Wanted: Cantonese-speaking Associate Producer in New York

New York-based documentary project seeks a Cantonese-speaking individual to assist with upcoming shoots in Brooklyn. The project, CHILDHOOD IN TRANSLATION, examines how immigrants are affected by language barriers. Producer Robert C. Winn is seeking an individual who can assist in the production of segments involving a Cantonese-speaking family in Brooklyn.

Qualifications: Applicants must be fluent in Cantonese and English; have a commitment to social issues and must be able to develop rapport with subjects who are discussing sensitive topics.

Duties: Include set-up and coordination of shoots with subjects, interpretation and some transcribing.

Info: The project starts immediately; hours vary, but will require approximately 8 hours/week through January. Pay, while modest, is available. If interested, please email resume and letter to childhoodintranslation@gmail.com.
